WAR-TIME ACTIVITIES, though dictated of course by the War effort, had a distinctly lively social side. Several Bootle children were evacuated here; the older girls attended the Lady Hawkins Grammar School at Kington, and the smaller ones went to our village school, their own teacher living in the village. They soon became incorporated into our village life; in fact, one of the girls eventually married one of our boys, and two of the boys stayed on after the War to work at the farm at which they were billeted.

Several of the R.A.F. officers and men from the nearby aerodrome at Shobdon had their families living or lodging in the village, and Dances were well patronised by both the R.A.F. and personnel from the American Army Camp at Baron's Cross. The Schoolroom was fitted up with black-out, and so the social life of the village was able to carry on uninterrupted.

During the War a great number of special campaigns were organised for local Savings Weeks, and many can remember such events as War Weapons Week, Warships Week, Wings for Victory Week, Salute the Soldier Week, and Thanksgiving Week. A very successful village Savings Group was carried on. At the end of the War events were organised to raise money for a Welcome Home Fund, and so successful were they that each serving man and woman of the parish received a gift of £10.

During the War, too, waste paper was collected by Mrs. Pat Smith and a troupe of young girls, who went out in the evenings with a hand-truck and collected from every house in the Civil Parish. The garage at Staick House was used as a store and for sorting into the different groups: cardboard, newspapers, periodicals and waste. Several tons were collected and sold to a waste-paper merchant in Hereford. While not wishing to belittle the excellence of the salvage drive, those of us who in the course of this history have sought in vain for Parish Magazines and other records have often wished that the workers had not done such a thorough job!

The above table shows that Eardisland, in common with most Herefordshire villages, has suffered a steady decline in population during the last 100 years, a tendency arrested recently by the building of 19 Council houses and an influx of 70 people, 46 of them new to our Parish. Thus the population figures for 1891, 1911 and 1955 are almost the same, though we would point out that we have estimated the figure for 1955 on the basis that the births and deaths balance for the period 1951-55.

Our biggest drop occurred between 1871 and 1881; and it is known that in this period we lost many of our men to work in the coalmines, or in the neighbouring Welsh counties, where the pay was higher for agricultural work, due to the serious shortages of labour there caused by men leaving for the mines. Doubtless, too, there were emigrations, and the Church Magazines of the early Seventies publish most interesting letters from one John Davis, one of our bellringers, who went to Cleveland, Ohio; and many remember the departure of Fred Macklen, late of the Cross, for the U.S.A. around 1900.

The drop of 97 in the period 1881 to 1891 is partly accounted for by the fact that in 1884, under the Divided Parishes Act, "detached parts of Eardisland were amalgamated with Dilwyn and Weobley". But this would not, of course, account fully for such a drop, and no doubt the continued agricultural depression was taking its toll.

OPPOSITE WE GIVE A TABLE with an analysis of Trades and Occupations in our Parish from 1856 till 1941. We would hasten to point out, however, that this is taken from various Directories, which are by no means always accurate; also, it covers the Ecclesiastical Parish (which includes Barewood), whereas our History as far as possible relates to the Civil Parish only. The figures which we now give - for 1955 - relate only to the Civil Parish, and have been prepared by one of our members:

Taking the picture over the 100 years, it will be seen that the self-employed craftsman has gradually disappeared from our midst, and few were left after 1900. At the same time more sophisticated occupations begin to appear - Income Tax collector; cyclemaker; poultry and egg dealer, and so on. After the First World War one has the advent of the Petrol pump, the taxi for hire, and the motor tractor for hire. Our Fishery, too, has come and gone this Century, and so has our village nurse.

Unfortunately we have no record of work taken up by our village girls and women over the period, but it is safe to assume that before the First War the great majority went into domestic service, and it is known that several went far afield to domestic work. Nowadays, with a good bus service to Leominster (and to Hereford via Leominster) many more opportunities are open to them: and for those who do not want full-time work there is no dearth of agricultural work available for at least six months of the year.

If one were to discount agriculture, we have many more men going outside the village to work in 1955 than working in it. This development is quite a logical one in this age of electricity and mechanisation - and the great majority in this class are men who have lived here for many years, only a very few being new-comers with no family connection with Eardisland. We can, therefore, rejoice in the fact that we are still a healthy village community, with many trades and many facets, and no rootless dormitory community of townspeople. Long may this state of affairs persist!
